PUBLISHER'S NOTE.

In presenting the ORKNEY AND SHETLAND ALMANAC AND COUNTY DIRECTORY FOR 1875, little is needed by way of preface. As on former occasions, every care has been taken to render the work as accurate and complete as possible; and it is hoped that few, if any, errors have escaped detection. Should, however, any inaccuracy be discovered, the Publisher will be glad to have such pointed out to him.

Oriental Calendars.

CHINA.—The Chinese civil year is lunar, and consists of 12 months of 29 and 30 days alternately. In every three years a thirteenth month is added to accommodate the variations of the solar and lunar years. But this is not entirely effected by such an arrangement, consequently the Chinese have a cycle of 60 years, in which period 22 intercalary months occur. The superstitions of that nation render the almanac of the utmost importance, as it contains a statement of "lucky and unlucky days," in a manner somewhat resembling the impudent impostures of the same kind sold in our own country. The year is divided into 24 periods, corresponding to the position of the sun at its entrance into, and at the middle of each sign of the Zodiac.

JAPAN.—As in China, the almanac is one of the most important works published in Japan. The year is divided into 12 months, corresponding to the 12 signs of the Zodiac. The months, however, vary in length, and the Mikado, or Religious Emperor, assigns the necessary intercalary days, and the months that have to be added to accommodate the variation of the solar and lunar years. The division of daily time is effected in a curious manner, a peculiar sacredness attaching to the number nine.

HINDU.—In this calendar the uni-solar year is employed for the regulation of festivals and domestic arrangements. The year commences at the instant of the conjunction of the sun and moon in the sidereal month Chaitra. The month consists of 30 Tithis or lunar days, and is divided into two equal parts of 15 Tithis each, corresponding with the increase and decrease of the moon in regard to its brightness; but in different parts of India variations of this method occur, to make up deficiencies, &c., that arise in the annual, or successive ahañan calendar in regard to the intercalary days.

WEATHER FALLACIES AND PROVERBS.

BY THE REV. C. H. SMITH.

THE first point in respect to weather fallacies I would mention, is the common, though wholly groundless, belief that the moon has any influence on the weather. It is, in spite of all demonstration to the contrary, and without the slightest ground for such assertion, continually declared that a change of weather may be looked for when the next change of the moon occurs. This may, perhaps, be pardonable in "Moonrakers"; but, in the cause of truth, I must boldly and unhesitatingly declare that the moon has not, and cannot have, the smallest effect on the weather. But as this popular delusion has become so engrained in the hearts of many that, notwithstanding the absence of all argument or reason in favour of it, numbers of people of all ranks and classes still cling to it, it may be worth while to mention that, with a view to allay such popular delusions, though without, of course, for a moment themselves sharing in them, some of the savants of France and others of Germany instituted a long series of careful investigations; the former continued during twenty years at the Paris Observatory, the latter during twenty-five years at Vienna. Both of these diligently carried on the most rigorous examination of changes of weather in connection with the lunar phases; but the declared result of their accurately-kept tables showed that there was no connection between them; and, in short, when theory was set aside, and the matter accurately tested by many thousand facts during a considerable period of time, it was definitely pronounced that "no correspondence whatever existed between the changes of the moon and those of the weather, such as were popularly supposed." The stock argument (if argument it can be called) of those who uphold the moon's influence on the weather, is that the moon does undoubtedly attract the waters of the sea; but because she causes the tides, which is demonstrable, therefore that she must needs influence the weather, which is by no means a parallel case, and for which there is no show of reason, I cannot conceive to be a fair inference. Perhaps it may be generally felt (as a leading gentleman in this county once said to me in speaking of this subject), "I don't pretend to argue the point or give any reasons for it; I simply say I must continue to hold it, because if you take away the moon as my guide to a change of weather, I have nothing else left to fall back upon;" or as another eager advocate for the lunar influence (thought himself by no means a lunatic) remarked to me, "I don't say that the weather alters exactly on the day of the moon's changes, but you will find it does so within three days before or after the change of moon; a proposition with which I most cordially agreed, seeing that the moon changes once in seven days, and the three days before and the three days after completely occupied the whole week; so after this fashion it would be strange, indeed, if the weather did not change within that prolonged period.

Evening grey, and morning red,
Sends the shepherd wet to bed:
Evening red, and morning grey,
Is the sure sign of a very fine day.

Mackerel sky, mackerel sky,
Never long wet, and never long dry.

Rain before seven,
Fine before eleven.

A rainbow in the morning
Is the shepherd's warning;
A rainbow at night
Is the shepherd's delight.

If the grass grows in Janiveer,
It grows the worse for't all the year.

A January spring
Is worth nothing.

Of all the months in a year,
Curse a fair Februeer.

As many mistises in March
So many frostises in May.

If March comes in like a lion,
It goes out like a lamb;
If it comes in like a lamb,
It goes out like a lion.

A cold April
The barn will fill

April showers
Bring summer flowers.

When April blows his horn,
'Tis good for both hay and corn.

Mist in May, and heat in June,
Makes the harvest come right soon.
Who doffs his coat on a winter's day,
Will gladly put it on in May.

A dripping June
Brings all things in tune.

Be it weal, or be it woe,
Beans blow before May doth go.

A haw year
Is a snaw year.

GARDENING CALENDAR FOR THE YEAR.

JANUARY.

Trench and manure, prepare hot-beds for asparagus, cucumbers, mint, potatoes, and the small salads. Sow the brown Dutch, and grand admiral cabbages, curled parsley for transplanting; frame peas, horn carrots, mazagan beans, onions (to be allowed to grow large).

FEBRUARY.

All the ground which is destined for early crops must now be prepared, and hot-beds be multiplied for cucumbers and early melons. Celery may be sown on a moderate hot-bed; also sow cabbages, horn carrots, lettuces, leeks, parsnips, radishes, the scarlet short-top is the best kind to put in now, and a few Bath or green Egyptian cos lettuces, and in fact most of the table vegetables. Those plants, such as cabbages, chives, garlic, shalots, under-ground onions, and horseradish, which are fit, should be transplanted.

MARCH.

In open borders sow asparagus, cabbages, carrots, curled and Hamburgish parsley, Neapolitan kale, parsnips, onions, &c.; plant out such vegetables as have been already sown. Before sowing, dig carefully, and make the ground level and fine. Main crops may be sown in this month, such as early long-pod beans, peas, celery, turnips, and, indeed, most other vegetables. Mustard, cress, lettuce, spinach, and radishes, may be sown every week or fortnight, for succession. Chives, shalots, garlic, &c., may be planted; plant rhubarb, potatoes, and Jerusalem artichokes. Cuttings or slips of sweet herbs may be planted.

APRIL.

Planting the vegetables which have been sown is now the chief business. Make hot-beds for cucumbers and melons; force kidney beans and Elford rhubarb. Plant out artichokes and potatoes; sow asparagus, beets, cabbages, celery, garden and kidney beans, Dutch turnips, lettuces, peas, radishes, small salading. Cress and mustard may now be sown under a south wall or fence. Clear fruit trees and bushes from suckers, and keep the ground about frequently loosened by the hoe.

MAY.

Sow carrots, lettuce, capsicums, cauliflowers, spinach, Knight's marrow fat peas, &c. Transplant cabbages, winter greens, lettuces, and celery. Spinach may be sown in a shaded situation, but will soon run to seed. The round-leaved kind is proper to sow now. Spinach is not a profitable summer crop. Hoe and stake peas, water newly planted crops, and propagate aromatic plants by slips and cuttings. Protect from wind and rain choice tulips, ranunculus, and anemones. Propagate herbaceous plants by dividing the roots; wall flowers, sweet williams, and rockets, by slips; and China roses, heliotropiums, &c., by cuttings.

JUNE.

Sow Cape broccoli, kidney beans, peas, lettuces, radishes, campions, spinach, small salading, &c. The best peas for sowing now are Knight's marrow peas; they will bear till October. Hoe the beds of table vegetables, and pick out the most curled plants of curled parsley, cress, and chervil for seed.

JULY.

Plant cabbages, savoys, lettuce, celery, &c. Train and regulate the summer shoots both of wall trees and standards; prune vine and fig trees, and shade ripe currants that are exposed to the full blaze of the sun. Take up garlic, onion, and shalots as their leaves begin to decay.

AUGUST.

Both cabbages, spinach, Welch onions, turnips, and radishes should now be sown. Parsley which is very thick and crowded may now be cut over close to the ground. Examine bulbs that they are not damp, or they will soon become mouldy. Gather herbs in flower for drying, and articles for pickling. Keep the soil about winter crops regularly loosened.

SEPTEMBER.

Sow vegetable seed for a spring crop. Prick out cabbage plants, and gather the ripe seeds. Hoe and clear the ground about turnips. Cabbage for collards in November, and German greens may be planted early in the month.

OCTOBER.

Sow mazagan beans, and friar peas on a warm southern border. Transplant cabbages, garlic, lettuces, and shalots, under frames.

NOVEMBER.

Force seakale, rhubarb, and asparagus. Transplant suckers taken from the roots of the pear and cod-lin plum, and prepare them for budding and grafting different fruits upon.

DECEMBER.

Celery should now be earthed up, and in so careful a manner as not to require the operation again. Force asparagus, rhubarb, and seakale.

MEASUREMENT AND WEIGHT OF CATTLE.

TAKE the Girth close behind the shoulders, and multiply it by itself: take the Length from the top of the shoulder to the extremity of the buttocks, which, multiplied by the above, and divided by 7344, will give the Weight of a Fat Animal in Imperial Stones. Should the Animal be extra fat, add a twentieth; and if inferior, deduct about the same quantity.

To find the Weight from the Table—Look in the column marked Girth for 35, and in the Column marked Length for 34, and then in the next column, in the same line with the length, is 5 stones, 9lbs., being the Imperial Weight.

Note.—The Smithfield Weight may be found by multiplying the Imperial Weight by 14, and dividing by 8.

2. The master of every registered Sea Fishing Boat must have on board his boat at all times (unless specially exempted by the Board of Trade) the Certificate of Registry.

3. If the Certificate is lost, immediate application must be made for another.

4. The Certificate must be presented to the Fishery Officer—

- a. Once in every year for examination and endorsement;

ORKNEY & SHETLAND ALMANAC COMPANION.

SHETLAND KNITTERS.

THE Shetland females are constantly and energetically industrious—not only in hoeing potatoes, making hay and drying and grinding corn; but if such heavy work as carrying sea-weed for manure, digging the ground with the spade, and harrowing in the seed. And then, every moment that is not occupied in these and other necessary operations of the household and farm, is filled up with knitting. You will never see a Shetland woman without work of this kind in her hand—whether with her keyshie of peats on her back, or seated on the sober pony, with which she goes often several miles to bring home dried moor-grass for fodder, or fish from the sea-side—whether talking to you, or paying or receiving a visit—all the while she plies swiftly the knitting-pins or wires. The younger women, whose sight is still good, and whose fingers are supple, have always two pieces of worsted work in progress at a time—the brown wool stocking for odd moments, or in the twilight, or when going about—and the fine lace-like shawl or veil for the long evenings, or half-holiday, in which the daughters of a family indulge themselves in turn. Socks, for home use or for sale, are always the work of the old women. There being no sort of manufactories, or openings for the regular industry of the females, excepting only knitting, they have, happily, so applied themselves to this art as to have brought it to great perfection, and secured for it a pretty regular demand, to which also the peculiar softness and fineness of the native wool no doubt in a considerable measure contributes.

The sheep of Shetland are of a peculiar breed, indigenous to the country. They are very small, and, of course, wild and hardy. Strangers, indeed, who see these a multitude of owners, to small ponds (or croos) for the purpose of being counted, marked, rooed, or occasionally taken for sale or slaughter.

The Shetland sheep are of various colours, besides black and white. They are of almost every shade of brown and grey, and some are piebald. The wool is also of very different quality, even on the same animal, the finest being about the throat and back. Nevertheless, even the coarser portions have a velvety softness, quite peculiar. Several causes have been assigned for this distinguishing property, besides the exclusiveness of the breed. One is the scant but often highly aromatic pasture of the Shetland hills, and another, that the wool is never shorn, but rooed—that is, pulled with the fingers from the creature's back, lock by lock. It must be remembered that sheep, like many other animals, yearly change their coating. Hence, as the season advances the wool becomes loose; the animal then rubs it along the heather, which acts as a comb; and, indeed, a fair wool harvest is often gained in this way by the poorer ownerless persons, who gather what is left among the stones and heath. At the time, then, when the fleece becomes loose—which is in June, about a month after lambing time—the sheep are collected, and their wool plucked off by women, who are sufficiently tender in the operation, so that the rooing gives no pain, but is rather relief to the animal. There is, moreover, left on the skin a considerable quantity of long hair, provided by nature for several species of animals in northern latitudes to protect them more completely from the inclemency of the weather, and this, it is obvious, would be totally removed were shears employed on the sheep.

The wool being brought home, is carefully separated into its different colours and qualities. There is nothing of which the Shetland housewife is so proud, or takes so much care, as her stock of wool. The coarsest is set aside for the fisherman's socks and mittens: a second quality is used for a sort of twilled blanketing, woven by some superannuated fishermen, in a very primitive hand-loom. This claith (so it is called), if grey or mixed, is dyed with indigo, and makes very durable jackets and trousers; if white, it is used for blankets and petticoats, or under-shirts for the men. The brown wool is almost entirely made into ladies' stockings, and the best of the grey into gentlemen's socks, of which a few pairs will always be found, on inquiry, in every cottage, awaiting an opportunity of sale. If none else offers, these hose are bartered at the shops for cotton goods, or any other sort of clothing the seller may require.

The spinning is all done by hand on a common lint-wheel. The staple of the wool is very short, and it is said cannot, on that account, be so well managed by machinery. The same circumstance accounts also for the fact that Shetland hose, however pleasant in wear, are not very durable.

The finest wool is not carded, but combed out, and then teased by the fingers. It is mixed with grease, or a little fine oil, and a few persons who are very expert can spin, from two ounces of raw wool, six thousand yards of three-ply thread—a sufficient quantity to make a good sized shawl. This process is very tedious, and requires manipulation so nice, that very few persons ever attain the art in perfection. More usually a veil may be made of half an ounce, and a shawl of four or five ounces of wool. This will serve to explain that, unlike Berlin and other wools, which are sold by weight, and spun by machinery, the finer the thread of Shetland worsted, the more the labour; it is therefore disposed of by the cut, or number of threads. Shetland has been celebrated for beautifully fine plain knitting, for the last century at least, and produced gloves for ten shillings and sixpence, and stockings for two guineas a pair, knitted on wires as fine as a sewing needle.

It is believed the Duke of Medina Sidonea, admiral of the Spanish Armada, and his followers, whose ship was wrecked on Fair Isle, and who afterwards wintered in Shetland, were the first that taught these islanders the art of knitting. Certain it is, that the painted-like manufacture of the Fair Isle people at this day is quite similar to what is made in the south of Spain. But the open work knitting, now so attractive to the poor artists, as well as to the public, is an invention for which the Shetland females themselves deserve all the credit. From the simplest beginnings, Iod on and encouraged by some ladies as a pastime, it has progressed from one thing to another, till it has attained its present celebrity, without the aid either of pattern-book or of other instruction than the diligence and taste of the natives themselves.

We are, indeed, aware that in Madeira, Germany, Malta, &c., very fine specimens of knitting in cotton and silk threads are produced; but after making every possible enquiry, we cannot make out that they were in advance of the Shetlanders in the invention of the art; still less that the latter, since the days of the shipwrecked admiral aforesaid, have ever received any foreign instruction whatever in knitting. In confirmation of this statement, should such be required, we may just mention that the patterns and terms here used in knitting have a nomenclature all their own. A Shetland knitter cannot comprehend a pattern from a book, if one is shewn to her; and should you attempt a translation for her benefit, she will hardly have patience to follow it; ten times more quickly than you can read it, move her fingers and her thread, and ere the design is half completed, she knows what is intended, and finishes—probably improves upon it—without more assistance.

By the last census, the whole population in Shetland was deficient nearly a third in males. This arises in a great measure from the absence of the sailor part of the families, which, with the circumstance that so many casualties befall the men at home, renders it quite common for whole households to be composed of only women and children. It may, indeed, be satisfactorily calculated, that three-fourths of the income of the islands, if Lerwick be excluded, is assignable to the agency of the female sex.—From "Sketches and Tales of the Shetland Islands."

A WHALE-HUNT IN ORKNEY.

M^r DANIEL GORRIE, in his book, 'Summers and Winters in the Orkneys,' gives an exceedingly graphic account of a whale hunt at Stromsay. The author had been on a visit there, and, while seated at breakfast, in the manse parlour, with his host, was startled by a hurried step along the lobby, and a flurried tap at the door. 'What can be wrong with the girl?—Come in, Maggie,' quoth the parson. The servant girl—Maggie Halero by name—instantly flung open the door, and stood before us, in somewhat scanty morning attire, almost breathless with great tidings. 'I was bidden to tell thee, said Maggie, panting like an over-run pointer, 'that the bay is fu' o' whales, and half a hundred boats after them!' 'Whales in the bay so soon in the season!' exclaimed the clergyman, starting to his feet. 'Come away,' he continued, seizing me by the button—'you have yet another day before you; we imitate the great of old, who entertained their guests with tournaments.'

The manse garden commanded a fine view of Mill Bay, and on rushing out into the open air, we saw a long, dark line of boats—some with sails, and some with oars—stretching across the blue waters of the broad vœ, upwards of a mile from the shore. The practised eye of my host caught the gleam of dorsal fins in front of the boats, and we immediately hurried down the grass and corn fields to the beach, scarcely drawing breath till we stood on the bank of the links above the sands of Mill Bay. The inmates of the neighbouring cottages had already assembled in eager groups on the grassy downs, and other islanders still came flocking from remoter farms and cabins to the shore. Several of the men were armed with harpoons, and instruments resembling Irish pikes, while farm lads, running red-hot-faced, flourished over their shoulders formidable three-pronged graps, and long-hafted bay-forks. Many of the matrons had their heads encased in woollen 'buities,' and this peculiar head-dress imparted a singular picturesqueness to the excited groups on the sea-bank. Other boats, with skilled hands on board, put off from various points along the shore, and the fleet of small craft in the bay was rapidly increased by the arrival of fresh yawls, which rounded the sheltering headlands of Grieness and Odness. The crowd of urchins on the beach, who thee'd and thou'd each other, like little Quakers, in the Orcadian vernacular, cheered lustily as boat after boat hove in view around the headlands, swelling the fleet of whalers.

The line of boats, crescent-shaped in order to enclose the shoal, was now little more than a quarter of a mile distant from the beach. The bottle-nosed or ca'ing whales (Delphinus deductor), showing their snouts and dorsal fins at intervals, seemed to advance slowly, throwing out skirmishers, and cautiously feeling their way. As the beach was smooth and sandy, with a gentle slope, the boatmen in pursuit were endeavouring to drive the shoal into the shallows, where harpoons, oars, bay-forks, and other weapons could be used with advantage against the floundering foe.

The excitement of the spectators on land increased as the long line of the sea monsters, steadily advancing, drew closer inshore. From the boats, following close behind, there came wafted across the water the sound of beating pitchers and rattling rowlocks, and the hoarse chorus of shouting voices that swelled into the loud prolonged 'O—O—O,' familiar in popular sea-songs. This Babel of noises, which the water mellowed into a wild war-chant with cymbal accompaniment, was meant to scare the shoal, and hasten the stranding of the whales. But an incident occurred that changed the promising aspect of affairs, turned the tide of battle, and gave splendour and new animation to the scene.

Eager to participate in the expected slaughter, two or three farm-lads, whose movements had escaped notice, suddenly shot off from the shore in a skiff, rowing right in front of the advancing line. The glitter and splash of oars alarmed the leaders, and the entire shoal, seized with a sudden panic, wheeled simultaneously round with a rapid rush, and dashed at headlong speed into the line of pursuing boats. A shout rose from the shore as the momentary flash of tail-fins, the heaving of the boats, and the rapid strokes of the boatmen showed all too plainly the escape of the whales, and the success of their victorious charge. Away beyond the broken line of the fleet they plunged in wild stampede, rearing their gleaming backs along the surface, and striking the blue waters into spangles of silver foam. Arches of spray, blown into the air at wide distances apart, served to indicate the size of the shoal and the speed of the fugitives.

'Whew-whish!' exclaimed the Rev. Peter Flett, allowing his pent-up breath to escape like steam; 'that was a gallant charge, and deserved to succeed, but I hope our brave lads will yet put salt upon their tails. A late minister of Lady parish, in the neighbouring island of Sanday, who was noted for homeliness of speech, used to say in his public prayers, "O Lord, dinna forget the puir island of Sanday!" and so I trust Providence this day will not forget the puir island of Stronsay. The boatmen have toiled hard for their share of the fish, and great would be the pity if the whales, escaping from the flinchers, made right off to the open sea. It is not every day that a drove onc hundred strong visits our shores; and there they go round the headland of Odness in full career.'

A commotion among the crowd at a short distance along the beach here arrested our attention, and we both hurried to the spot. The exciting spectacle of the grand charge and wild flight of the whales had so absorbed our gaze that we failed in noticing a mishap, which was fortunately more ludicrous than alarming. The three youths who foolishly rowed off from the shore, and caused the stampede, had suffered for their rashness by getting their skiff capsized when the sea monsters, with flying and flapping tail-fins, wheeled round to the charge. On gaining the outskirts of the crowd we found the three luckless whale-hunters already beached. Bonnetless, dripping, and disconsolate, they were the objects of mirth to some, of commiseration to others. 'Thou sees what comes o' flagging the fish, Tam,' said a sympathising young woman to the tallest of the three, who grinned a ghastly smile. '"Burnt hairns dread the fire"—thou'll think twice afore thou goes into a boat again, Georgie Twatt,' quoth a white-hooded matron to one of the youths. 'Na, na, puir birds! away wi' ye, and cast off yir dreepin' claes, and be thankfu' ye wesena droundit,' exclaimed another matron, propelling the youths with her palm to get them under weigh. The three lads did not seem at all inclined to move, until the urchins, who were wading about in the shallow water, had fished up their bonnets and hay-forks. At last they made off, followed by a number of sympathising women; and we immediately set out in the direction of Odness, to catch a sight of the whales, which had quite disappeared from the bay. The boats had turned in pursuit when the shoal escaped, and they were now making all haste to double the headland. On gaining the top of the cliffs, after a rapid and trying walk, we were glad to observe that the whales, recovered from their fright, drifted leisurely along the coast, giving way at times to eccentric gambols. 'All right!' cried Mr Flett, handing me back my binocular vade mecum; 'the brutes are coasting away famously around Lamb Head, and they are almost certain to take a snooze in Rothiesholm Bay, which is the best whale-trap I know in Orkney. Let us sit down here on the top of the cliffs till the boats come abreast, and then we shall take a nearer way to Rothiesholm than following the line of the coast.'

The summit of the rocks, softly carpeted with grass, moss, and wild flowers, afforded a pleasant resting-place, and commanded a picturesque prospect. To eastward there was a wide expanse of sea, stretching away without a break to Norwegian fiords. Afar on the horizon I caught sight of a great ship, under a cloud of white sail, with prow pointing to the north, and when the line of Wordsworth—

'Where lies the land to which yon ship must go?'
came involuntarily to my lips, Mr Flett quietly, but prosaically, rejoined, 'She is, I take it, a German emigrant ship, bound from Bremen to New York, and the skipper seems disposed to run down Fair Isle ere he turns his fraulein figure-head to the west. These German liners are always knocking their noses against the islands. One of them went lately bang full-sail in a fog against the low shores of Sanday, as if she had been trying to strike out for herself a new north-west passage.'

The whale-hunting fleet, composed of all varieties of small craft, was now well abreast of their resting place. A fine and favourable breeze had sprung up, and the fishing-yawls, with their brown sails out-spread, coasted briskly along. The rear-guard of the fleet consisted of row-boats, manned by patient and determined boatmen, who pulled hard at the oars in the prospect of winning some share of the spoil. We remained a short time on the moss-crowned cliffs, gazing on the animated scene, and listening to the voice of the boatmen, the splash of the waves below, and the plaint of restless sea-birds. On leaving our lair we dropped down upon a neighbouring farm-house, feeling our need of what in most parts of Scotland is modestly termed 'refreshment.' Although the farmer himself could nowhere be found, his helmate gave us hospitable entertainment, and we quenched our thirst with liberal draughts of home-brewed beer. A couple of shelties were then placed at our disposal, and away we trotted along field-paths and rough tracts to the head of Rothiesholm Bay, on the south side of the island. This bay deeply indents the land, running up between the parishes of Lady and St Nicolas. From all the cottages and farms in the district the islanders were flocking to the shore of the bay, and we had thus good hope that a portion of the shoal at least had run blindfold into the whale-trap of Rothiesholm. On nearing the shore we were delighted to find that Mr Flett's prediction was fulfilled. A large detachment of the whales, supposed to number one hundred and fifty, had entered the bay, while the rest of the shoal had disappeared amid the reaches of the Stronsay Firth.

Rounding the point of Torness, and stretching across the mouth of the bay, the fleet of small craft again hove into view, and pressed upon the rear of the slowly advancing and imprisoned whales. Among the onlookers there was now intense excitement, the greatest anxiety being manifested lest the detached wing should follow the previous practice of the main army, and again break the line of the boats in a victorious charge. The shoutings and noise of the boatmen recommenced, and echoed from shore to shore of the beautiful and secluded bay. A fresh alarm seized the monsters, but instead of wheeling about, and rushing off to the open sea as before, they dashed rapidly forwards a few yards, pursued by the boats, and were soon floundering helplessly in the shallows. The scene that ensued was of the most exciting description. Fast and furious the boatmen struck and stabbed to right and left, while the people on the shore, forming an auxiliary force, dashed down to assist in the massacre, wielding all sorts of weapons from roasting-spits to ware-forks. The poor wounded monsters lashed about with their tails, imperilling life and limb, and the ruddy hue of the water along the stretch of shore soon indicated the extent of the carnage. The whales that had received their death-stroke emitted shrill cries, accompanied with a strange snorting and humming noise, which has been not inaptly compared to the distant sound of military drums pierced by the sharp piping of fifes. As the blood of the dead and dying more deeply incarnadined the sea, it gave a dreadful aspect of wholesale butchery to the murderous close of the summer whale-chase. Some of the larger whales displayed great tenacity of life, and survived repeated strokes and stabs, but the unequal conflict closed at last, and no fewer than a hundred and seventy carcases were dragged up the beach. One or two slight accidents occurred, but to me it seemed marvellous that the boatmen did not injure each other as much as the whales amid the confusion and excitement of the scene. The carcases, as I was informed, would realise between £300 and £400, and grateful were the people that Providence had remembered the island of Stronsay by sending them a wonderful windfall of bottle-noses, fresh from the confines of the Arctic Circle.

THE TOWN OF LERWICK.

THE accompanying illustration, 'Evening View of Lerwick,' is by Mr J. T. Reid, author of 'Art Rambles in Shetland.' In that work he says:—Lerwick has one main street running parallel with the edge of the water, and on each side houses, shops, and warehouses are built, with the utmost disregard of everything and everybody save the convenience of the individual proprietor. Thus one gentleman from his front window has for a view his neighbours gable; and some houses are planted in the centre of the street, rendering it in parts so narrow that two people can scarcely walk abreast with any degree of comfort. It is all paved with flag-stones, and numerous narrow by-lanes lead up to the carriage-road on the Hill-Head; while shaggy little shelties, with well-balanced loads of peat, walk leisurely alongside of the foot-passengers, following women, who, while bearing a like burden, are ever busily engaged knit, knitting at what seems the never-ending stocking.

The shop-keepers, termed 'general merchants,' are not without claims to the title, for in one establishment you can purchase an immense variety of articles, including groceries, hardware, breadstuffs, clothing, and articles of ship chandlery, &c. Knitting shawls, veils, stockings, &c., from the wool of the native sheep, so remarkable for silky softness and warmth, is the chief employment of the large female population of the country, and an important trade exists in the barter of these articles to the merchants for tea, sugar, bonnets, dresses, &c.

In Lerwick there are eight or ten places of worship, and no lack of schools. The town now boasts of a first-class educational establishment, the Anderson Institute, endowed by the late Arthur Anderson, Esq., a native of Lerwick.

To the stranger, Lerwick forms a convenient head-quarters, being the rendezvous of the sailing packets, which leave

It is not known precisely when Lerwick was founded, but Brand relates that in 1700 it contained between two and three hundred families; and that thirty years before that, it contained only four houses.

EVENING VIEW OF LERWICK.

weekly for the different islands, on the day after the departure of the mail-steamer. Within the last few months a steamer has begun to ply twice a-week between Lerwick and the North Isles; while of boats there is no end, and so near that in some cases you might drop into one out of your window.

It is supposed to derive its name from Larwick, a small town near to the Naze of Norway. Doubtless it owes its prosperity, if not its existence, to the near proximity of Bressay Sound, where fleets, consisting of about one hundred sail of men-of-war, have repeatedly anchored.

Hints for Home Comfort.

LATE at breakfast—hurried for dinner, cross at tea.

Put your balls or reels of cotton into little bags, leaving the ends out.

One flannel petticoat will wear nearly as long as two, if turned behind part before, when the front begins to wear thin.

Never put away plate, knives and forks, &c., uncleaned, or great inconvenience will arise when the articles are wanted.

In mending sheets and shirts, put the pieces sufficiently large, or in the first washing the thin parts give way, and the work is all undone.

In winter, get the work forward by daylight, to prevent running about at night with candles. Thus you escape grease spots, and risks of fire.

Apples and pears, cut into quarters and stripped of the rind, baked with a little water and sugar, and eaten with boiled rice, make capital food for children.

A leather strap, with a buckle to fasten, is much more commodious than a cord for a box in general use for short distances; cording and uncording is a tedious job.

After washing, overlook linen, and stitch on buttons, hooks and eyes, &c.; for this purpose keep a 'housewife's friend,' full of miscellaneous threads, cottons, buttons, hooks, &c.

For ventilation open your windows both at top and bottom. The fresh air rushes in one way, while the foul makes its exit the other. This is letting in your friend and expelling your enemy.

There is not any real economy in purchasing cheap calico for gentlemen's night shirts. Cheap calico soon wears into holes, and becomes discoloured in washing.

Persons very commonly complain of indigestion: how can it be wondered at, when they seem, by their habit of swallowing their food wholesale, to forget for what purpose they are provided with teeth?

Never allow your servants to put wiped knives on your table, for, generally speaking, you may see that they have been wiped with a dirty cloth. If a knife is brightly cleaned, they are compelled to use a clean cloth.

There is not anything gained in economy by having very young and inexperienced servants at low wages; they break, waste, and destroy more than an equivalent for higher wages, setting aside comfort and respectability.

Medical Hints.

THIS following are not given in opposition to the duly qualified practitioner, but to serve in cases of sudden illness or accident, when the attendance of a medical man cannot be procured, and delay in treating the patient might, in many cases, prove serious, or subject the sufferer to prolonged pain. In all cases of a severe nature no time should be allowed to elapse, that can possibly be avoided, without seeking professional advice.

SCALDS AND BURNS.—Remove all covering carefully. Do not break blisters, but cover and encircle with flour, or a linen cloth saturated with lime-water and linseed oil—a third part of the former to two-thirds of the latter.

CUT WOUNDS.—Connect, as exactly as possible, the edges of the wound, which position maintain by strips of sticking-plaster. If painful and throbbing, remove the strapping, and poultice with bread and water.

BRUISED WOUNDS.—Connect the edges as before. Should this fail, apply a bread and water poultice; and when matter forms, a linseed meal. If excessive bleeding, apply pressure by means of a linen pad.

CHILBLAINS.—Rub with soap liniment, if not broken—use warm stockings. If broken, poultice with bread and water, or linseed meal.

BLEEDING OF THE NOSE.—Apply cold water, and compress the nostril from whence the blood flows. If ineffective, plug with lint, or linen rag soaked in alum solution.

SRAINS.—Well rest the joint. Apply warm moist flannels, or bread and water poultice—if necessary, leeches.

COLDS, WITH OR WITHOUT FEVER.—Apply hot water to the feet and legs before going to bed. Take warm gruel, or weak tea, well milked. Apply a mustard poultice to the back of the head—if painful, keep on until skin reddens and smarts. Apply a mustard plaster to painful regions, whether abdomen, chest, or side, until the skin smarts.

Fainting.—Place in a horizontal position, with head low. Dash cold water in the face. Administer a little stimulant.

HYSTERICS.—Place on a couch. Pour cold water on the head, and administer 15 or 20 drops of fetid spirit of ammonia in a wine glass full of water.

TALLOW GREASE.—Never apply tallow grease to wounds, or materials likely to come into contact therewith, as arsenic is frequently used in its preparation.

FINLAY MOWAT, AND HIS ADVENTURE WITH THE PIRATE.

IT is probable that few of my readers ever heard before of the name of Finlay Mowat, the Freswick pilot. Finlay flourished about the middle of the sixteenth century, and was rather a celebrated person in his way. From his boyhood, our hero shewed a great predilection for the sea; and when he grew up to man's estate, his chief employment was acting as a pilot to vessels passing through the Pentland Firth, which, at this period, was the terror of all strangers. Though gifted with a large cranium, and rapid utterance, and possessing undoubted skill as a pilot, Finlay was, somehow or other, looked upon by his friends and acquaintances as a 'gupus.' But there were some clever points about him notwithstanding. Like the generality of those who are said to 'want a cast,' he had a great memory, and was extremely ready-witted. He was at the same time very venturesome, and very confident of his own nautical abilities. Every puff of wind or ripple of land sea did not deter him from following his calling on his favourite element.

One afternoon, as our pilot was taking his dinner, one of his ch'dren came running in with the welcome intelligence that a large vessel was 'flitting.' Finlay instantly threw down his spoon, wiped his mouth with the back of his hand, and flew to the door. Then, shutting the one eye, and looking through his fist, as a telescope, with the other, he espied one of the largest ships he had seen for some time, making the customary signal for a pilot. Having collected his crew, Finlay, without losing a moment's time, launched his skiff, hoisted his lugg-sail, and set off. On nearing the vessel, a rope was thrown to the boat, and in a twinkling, our pilot was on deck, in his seal-skin cap, black grey unmentionables, and pea-jacket of the same material, fastened round the waist with a large leather strap and brass buckle. Finlay looked about him for a moment or two with a sort of bewildered curiosity. He had been on board of many vessels in his time, but there was something about this one—which was called by the formidable name of the 'Leviathan'—that he had not observed in any other. There seemed to be a great many arms, and lethal weapons of every description, lying about the deck; and the crew were a set of the roughest and most desperate looking men he ever saw in his life. Among other things, a black flag, with the horrible device of a death's head, particularly struck him. Was he on board a pirate ship? The unpleasant suspicion dashed across his mind, but he thought it best to 'keep a c'm sough,' and make no remarks on the matter. 'Are you a regular pilot?' demanded Captain Gruffwater, the master of the vessel, a fierce-looking fellow about forty, with huge red whiskers, and a deep scar across his left eye-brow. 'What's your wull, sir?' asked Finlay, touching his cap with the most respectful deference. 'Blast your eyes! I say, Are you a regular pilot?' 'O, ay, sir,' responded Finlay; 'quite regular. I minteen as good a character as any in war toon, and can shew a certificate to that effect, signed by the minister, session-clerk, and four elders.' 'Confound your certificate!' cried the captain, provoked at his stupidity; 'I say, Are you in the habit of regularly piloting, and well acquainted with the coast hereabouts, particularly the Orkneys?' 'O, I understan' ye noo, sir,' replied Finlay. 'Yes, I know every hole and bore about them perfectly. I have piloted ships in ma time to every pairt o' the Orkneys. I know the whole from Cantiick Head, over by there in Waas, to the Start of Sanda. If I could only write I would engage to pilot a ship to any pairt o' the known world. Whar dye want me to carry ye till, if it's a fair question?' 'To Kirkwall,' answered Captain Gruffwater. 'Vera well,' said Finlay, and ordering his own boat home, he immediately took charge of the vessel, and began to issue out his orders in a strong authoritative tone, and to swear lustily at the crew, partly to be revenged on the captain for bullying him, and partly to impress the ship's company with a favourable idea of his courage and independence. 'Don't hurry the men in that way, sir,' said the captain; 'give them a little time.' 'D—f a moment,' said Finlay; 'don't you see the ebb tide is half spent, and the night will be on us ere ye can look about ye. The Pentland Firth is no a thing to be trifled wi.'

By this time the night was setting in. The sun had gone down in an ugly 'bank,' and the wind, which was hitherto from the south, suddenly chopped about to the north-west, and began to blow freshly. There being every appearance of what seamen term a 'dirty night,' the higher sails were now stowed, the top-sails double reefed, and the ship otherwise trimmed to meet the approaching gale.

Finlay continued to issue out his orders, and swear with increased vehemence:—
 ‘Bear a han’, you lazy ——; tak’ a pull upon your lee braces there; haul home your fore and main sheets.’

Meantime, Captain Gruffwater paced the deck hurriedly, now looking at the sky, and now at the rigging of the ship. He did not like the appearance of the weather, and he had no great confidence in the skill of his pilot, who appeared to him to be an ignorant and confident blockhead. At length, he seized a pistol, and coming close up to Finlay, as he was standing beside the helmsman, and swearing away at a great rate—‘Sirrah,’ said he, ‘I have great doubts as to your fitness for taking charge of this vessel; but, by ——, if you cast her away, or expose us to the least danger, the first thing I shall do will be to blow out your brains.’ Finlay scratched the back of his head, and said that he would do all that a man could to bring them to the proposed harbour; but as the night was likely to be very rough, and there would be no moonlight, he thought they would better lie to at the back of Duncansbay Head till next morning, and then they would see their way clearly. To this very reasonable and salutary proposal, Gruffwater objected. He said he would not lie out all night; and ordered the pilot, if he could not bring him to Kirkwall, to bring him to some other port. While this point was discussing between Mowat and the chief buccaneer, an individual, having the appearance and attire of a person of quality of the period, hastily ascended the companion ladder, and came on deck. The stranger’s countenance, though not handsome, was strongly marked and intelligent, with a peculiar air of audacity and recklessness about it, like one habituated to desperate enterprises. This person, whom the captain addressed by the name of Northland, also expressed a great wish to get into port, and insisted that the pilot should give it a trial. ‘Vera well,’ said Finlay, ‘let us bear away to Widewall; but I tell ye beforehand, ye may look out for a wet jarcet.’ After passing Duncansbay Head, the wind and sea increased in violence, and, as Finlay prognosticated, they got a tremendous washing, particularly off the island of Swona. The night, which proved exceedingly dark and rainy, added not a little to the danger and difficulty of the passage. By great good luck, however, Finlay at length got the ‘Leviathan’ safe into the commodious bay of Widewall, and now he thought he had nothing to do but demand his pilot fee, and make the best of his way home across the Firth. But he found that he was not so easily to get rid of his new acquaintances. The captain told him that he had still further occasion for his services, and forbade him, on the peril of his life, to leave the ship. It was in vain that poor Finlay appealed to his humanity and conscience (things of which Gruffwater knew nothing), and represented that he had a wife and six helpless children depending upon him, and that he could not be any length of time from home. Gruffwater would, on no consideration, allow him to leave the vessel. Finlay found himself in a most disagreeable plight. To add to his other miseries, he was half starved, having got nothing since he came on board, except some mouldy bread, and a piece of salt junk, which burnt him up with thirst, to quench which he was allowed nothing but some bad water, and not even a sufficiency of that. Whether this was owing to the niggardliness of the captain, or to the lack of eatables and drinkables on board, he did not know. Finlay’s appetite, in general, was excellent, and it was a hard thing, he thought, to be treated as a slave and starved at the same time. He wished he had never set foot on board this cursed vessel, which, in his opinion, was rightly named the ‘Leviathan.’

The next morning, the captain told Finlay that, as he was short of provisions, he would have to accompany, as land pilot, a foraging party of his crew ashore. Finlay at first vehemently protested against going on any such unlawful expedition. He could not, he said, conscientiously engage in an act of downright robbery. He was a poor but honest man, and had nothing but his character to depend on, and so forth. Finlay’s arguments weighed nothing with the pirate, who gave him the alternative of either going with his men, or being tucked up to the yard-arm and hanged for his obstinacy. In this fearful dilemma, Finlay thought it best to make a virtue of necessity and accompany the mauladers. A party of twenty-five stout fellows, armed with swords and pistols, and headed by Northland, now took boat and went ashore—the pilot being placed in the van, and threatened with death the moment he made the least attempt to escape. The fiery cross, we believe, neither at this nor at any former period was ever used in Ultima Thule. The rumour of the invasion, however, spread like wild-fire, and a large body of the inhabitants soon collected to beat off the enemy, armed, for the most part, with graps and pitchforks. At the head of this formidable band appeared the Laird of Hoxay, mounted on a long-tailed grey garron, with a hair halter, and pad of sheep’s skin, and equipped with an old broad-sword, which, like Hudibras'

*'Trenchant blade, Toledo trusty,
 For want of fighting was grown rusty.'*

To 'screw their courage to the sticking point,' Hoxay addressed them in a spirited harangue, to which his followers responded with a loud cheer, and brandishing their weapons, set off at a quick march to meet the freebooters. On observing the islanders, the pirates, who were dispersed in small parties, immediately formed themselves into a body, and fired a volley at them as soon as they approached within gunshot. Hoxay's horse, which had not been accustomed to stand fire, started at the report, wheeled about, flew off at the hand-gallop, and, in a twinkling, flung his rider in a marsh. The laird, on extricating himself out of this 'slough of despond,' threw off coat, hat, and shoes, and though 'a very fat man,' with a pair of legs like a parenthesis, ran after his nag with a speed that was truly astonishing. The men, who had not been accustomed to the smell of gunpowder any more than Hoxay's Bucephalus, naturally enough, followed the example of their leader, and throwing away their arms, took to their heels with the utmost precipitation. The pirates complimented them with a cheer and a second volley on their departure, and having now nothing to disturb them, set about collecting their booty. As soon as they had got on board with their plunder, the 'Leviathan' weighed anchor and set sail for Kirkwall, passing through Holm Sound. Previous to sailing, Finlay once more begged Capt. Gruffwater to allow him to go home, adding that, if his request was granted, he would ask no pilot fee. Gruffwater, with a sardonic smile, said that he was a most useful fellow, and a first-rate pilot, and that he could not dispense with his services as long as he remained in the Orkneys. Finlay did not know what to think. He found himself actually a prisoner on board the pirate ship, and what added to his distress, he saw no means of escape. From some words which he overheard between the captain and Northland, the pirates evidently intended plundering the town of Kirkwall. It struck Finlay that in all probability he would be forced to accompany them on this occasion also, and he trembled at the idea of an encounter with the populace and the civic authorities of Kirkwall.

The pirates arrived in Kirkwall Bay in the evening, and no sooner was the ship anchored than they set about preparing for the intended attack. The long-boat and jolly-boat were both lowered, and forty stout fellows, the very pick of the crew, together with Finlay, embarked under the charge of the same individual who led them on in the late foray in South Ronaldsay. The citizens, who had no expectation of the coming attack, had mostly retired to bed; but the landing of the buccaneers being fortunately discovered ere it was too late, the alarm bell was instantly rung from the lofty steeple of St Magnus, and the Kirkwallians, in a very short time, mustered to a man in Broad Street, armed with every possible sort of weapon, and headed by Gilbert Balfour, the Governor of the Castle, and Provost Mainland—the latter gentleman, in the hurry of the moment, having taken time only to throw on his official hat and drawers! A desperate conflict now took place between the parties. The Kirkwallians fought with the most determined gallantry, and pressed so hard upon the pirates that they eventually found it necessary to retreat, leaving behind three of their number mortally wounded. During the fight, six of them were captured; the rest, with some difficulty, got to their boats, and effected their escape on board the 'Leviathan.' The prisoners, of whom the unfortunate Finlay happened to be one, were immediately lodged in the Castle of Kirkwall to await their doom. To describe the poor pilot's state of mind at this moment would be impossible. Balfour and the civic authorities were bent on summary punishment, and Finlay saw nothing before him but the prospect of being hanged. Among other grave considerations, the thought of what would become of 'Maggie and his sma' family' after he was gone brought the tear into his eye, 'albeit, unused to the melting mood.' He began seriously to think of preparing for another world, having, as he well knew, a great many sins to account for, both of omission and commission. In short, he became a great penitent; but still he felt a reluctance to leave the world, particularly in the circumstances in which he was placed. To die decently and honourably in his bed like a Christian was nothing; but to be hanged by the neck in Orkney, and that, too, for a crime of which he was not guilty, was a most distressing and unfortunate business. But how was he to clear himself? He had no friends or acquaintances in Kirkwall, and before he could get any over from Caithness he would be defunct—'dead as a herring.' At length he bethought himself of his certificate from the Kirk-session, which invaluable document he generally carried along with him. This testimonial satisfactorily proved two things—namely, That the bearer thereof was a native of Canisbay, and at the time when it was written, which was two years back, he maintained a decent moral character; but, as Mr Inkster, the town-clerk, shrewdly observed, he might be a pirate and a vagabond now. Fortunately, at this critical period, Mowat, the Laird of Bucholie, to whom Finlay was particularly well known, happened to arrive in Kirkwall, and through his means, aided by the certificate in question, the pilot was acquitted of the charge of piracy, and liberated from prison. The next day, two ships of war, commanded by Grange and Tullibardine, arrived in Kirkwall Bay in pursuit of the pirate ship, which contained the celebrated Earl of Bothwell. It was he who had headed the two plundering expeditions just described. Grange and Tullibardine were much disappointed in not falling in with the fugitive—Bothwell having, some hours previous to their arrival, sailed for the North Isles.

A PRESS-GANG STORY.

"WELL, Mister Tom, it's half-past ten on Saturday night, and I've been in the boat all the week, but I'll tell you one story yet afore I turn in. It's about the Press-gang; and the sister o' the chaps told me it herself, at her own fireside. She was a widow woman then, but when the affair I'm going to tell you about happened, she was a young lassie, and I think, if I mind right, there were three or four sisters o' them. Her own name was Hourston, an' she belonged to the island o' Egilshay. She had two brothers—splendid, strong fellows—an' the Press-gang were terrible anxious to nab them; an' so, one dark winter's night, eleven of them went out from Kirkwall to Egilshay, to try if they couldna take them. There were seven men-o'-war's-men an' four o' the Kirkwall gang—(there were gangs then everywhere you know)—chaps belonging to the places, that kent the best men to take)—old Waas, an' black Jock Anderson, an' Willie Reid (a strong, able man), an' I don't just mind the other one's name. Any way, they got to Egilshay, an' made old Saunders Lawrence, Mr Baikie's kelp grieve, pilot them to the house where the brothers lived—the house o' Sound—the northmost house in Egilshay, I think it is, an' made him tell what sort o' a place it was too. The outer door opened into the fire-house, an' then there was a room in bye—the cellar, they ca'd it—just like any other little old house in Orkney, you know. Well, a' the lasses were sittin' aboot the fire, an' their mither an' faither, an' the fire was brunt low, when they heard men's feet outside, an' afore they kent what was up, the whole gang was in upon them. It was so dark, they didna ken even then wha they were, till one o' the fellows took the teenys an' lifted a gled peat oot o' the fire, an' blew on it, to see where the brothers were. Then the light flashed on the navy buttons, an' the old woman knew in a minnit wha they were, an' wi' that up she jumps, an' gaes the chap's hand such a kick that it sent the teenys up to the roof, an' the gled peat to the tither side o' the hoose, wi' a dad, till the sparks stood oot aboot it like a comet. So that stopped that. Then a' the lasses raise, an' struggled wi' the Press-gang; an' one o' the gang grippit the old wife, an' was coarse on her, when Jamie (wha had been in bed in the firehouse) cried, "If you're come for me, tak' me if you can, but don't abuse my mither." So they fand oot where he was, an' got aboot him, but he keept them aff; an' a' this time the lasses were no' idle, I tell you. Hughie—theither brother—was ben in the cellar, an' tried first to get oot through the theek (thatch) roof, but there was nothing to stand on, an' he couldna hang by a cupple wi' one hand an' mak' a hole wi' the ither; so he dropped doon on the floor again, an' took up a wappin' three-taed pot that was there in baith hands, an' ran into the fire-house amang them, keepin' it gaun whirlin' aroond him; an' I'm blowed if he didn't send them to the floor just like peelin's o' onions! an' got to the door. The gang had set Willie Reid to keep the door, because he was a very strong man, but Hughie dashed him against the wa', an' made off just as he was, in his shirt an' drawers an' stockings only, an' not anither stick on him. He ran for the shore, an' hauled doon a big yawl him-lane (self), an' pulled across the soond to Rousay; an' he was safe there, for the Press-gang were never fain o' Rousay, because a' the Rousay folk stuck oot against them to a man, an' they got very few there. The Rousay folk got clothes for him, an' sent him over to Evie, an' he took right across the hills to Stromness, an' that very day shipped for the Straits. The gang got Jamie, though. When he couldn't get out, he cried for one o' his sisters to fetch his gun out o' the barn, but his faither cried not to shoot any o' them, for God's sake, or he wad ha' done it in a minnit, for Jamie was a wild chap, an' cared for nobody when his temper was up. The gang hadna muckle to brag o', for every skin o' them got a keepsake to mind Jamie by afore they mastered him. I don't mind whether they got him aboard o' a man-o'-war or no, as it's a long time since I heard the story. It was droll times in Orkney then, Mister Tom. Good-night.'

CAPTURE OF A SMUGGLER.

I ASKED Bill Muir, at the Corner one breezy night, if he recollects the 'Prince of Wales,' a gun brig. 'Do I recollect the "Prince o' Wales" gun brig? Fine that! She was here in the revenue service, commanded by Captain Oliver. Why, a great part of her crew were Orkneymen. Captain John Scott, o' the steamer "Nortaman," served his time in her (You'll mind the "Northman" yourself). He had the "Mary Balfour" too—the fastest craft that ever lay along the east coast of Scotland. Aye, she was the lass to go! An' Jamie Budge—one o' the Budges o' Stembister in Holm—was gunner, an' Robbie Cormack o' Deerness was on her. It was his faither that picked up Captain Oliver, when he was only a cabin boy, off o' a wreck at Deerness. An' Jock Bews was on her, an' Willie Muir, an' Jamie Muir o' the "Thomas and Jean," an' a chap Nicholson o' Loughope, an' Davie Spence o' Deerness, an' lots more o' them—all Orkney lads, an' good lads they were too. Man, I'll tell you about hoo she grippit the lugger aff o' the Fair Isle. The "Prince" had an English pilot a while. His name was—was—Marsh; yes, Marsh—a fine, strong-lookin', wild kind o' a chap; but he left her; an' I just mind when he met Captain Oliver in Kirkwall here, after he had been away from her a good while, and asked a passage to Shetland in her. Marsh was a queer kind o' fellow, but having been in her afore, he got a passage at once, and went in the brig to Shetland. Noo, I must tell you, Marsh had a lugger load o' brandy an' French wine, an' Hollands gin, an' tobacco, an' such things, an' he was on his way to Shetland to sell her cargo, an' expected to meet her there soon; but he met her sooner than he wanted; for as the "Prince" came abreast o' Fair Isle to the east'ard, she sighted a lugger on the west side, an' at once bore away to overhaul her. Bonnily kent Marsh wha's lugger it was, poor fellow, though he never opened his mouth, or let on a bit.

It was in the winter time, an' a close drift o' snow came on before the brig came near her, an' for fear o' accidents she hove to for a bit. When the snow cleared off, by George! there lay the lugger, almost aboard o' her! My eye! but she wasn't a minute o' making off. She was a true lugger, you understand, Mister Tom—something like that o' Askan's, at the West Pier over there, but a sharp, fast craft—an' when she came to the wind, the brig couldn't look near the wind she fetched. Captain Oliver saw it was no go, an' ordered the gunner to fire a gun to bring her to; but she never heeded it; an' then he told him to let her have a shot, an' Jamie Budge he laid one o' the bow guns, an' faith if the shot didn't cut the sling o' the main-lug, an' fetch the biggest sail in her flop down on the decks o' her. That settled her hash. Before they could do anything to get it up again, the brig was alongside, an' the lugger was a prize; an' my! how mad the chaps in her was when they saw Marsh in the revenue craft. They swore he had sold them, an' vowed to have the most ample vengeance, though he, poor chap, had never expected to see her for a couple o' weeks, an' never opened his mouth about her. It did look ugly, but it wasn't his fault at all. It was a big catch for the brig, though—sixty pounds to each man, thirty pounds to each boy, an' goodness knows how much the officers got, but you're sure they didn't want it.

What came o' the lugger's crew? Why, they were sent to prison; an' prison was prison then I tell you, an' no mistake. Marsh never went back home again, though; he was afraid the chaps would kill him if he showed his face there; but he made many a trip to Orkney after that time, an' many a cask o' Hollands an' brandy did he land about the Start o' Sanday, an' out that way. He let his beard grow, an' dressed himself like a Dutchman, an' very few folks recognised him for the owner of that unlucky lugger.'

SUPERSTITION IN THE FAR NORTH.

DR ROGERS, in his work 'Familiar Illustrations of Scottish Character,' published in 1831, says that the Rev. John Brydou, minister of Sandsting and Aithsting in Shetland, in his statistical account of the united parishes, supplies the following interesting particulars respecting the superstitions then existing in that district.

WRESTING-THREAD.

WHEN a person has received a sprain, it is customary to apply to an individual practised in casting the wresting-thread. This is a thread spun from black wool, on which are cast nine knots, and tied round a sprained leg or arm. During the time the operator is putting the thread round the affected limb, he says, but in such a tone of voice as not to be heard by the bystanders, nor even by the person operated upon:—

‘*The Lord rade,
And the foal slade;
He lighted,
And he righted;
Set joint to joint,
Bone to bone,
And sinew to sinew.
Heal, in the Holy Ghost’s name.*’

RINGWORM.

THE person afflicted with ringworm takes a little ashes between the forefinger and thumb three successive mornings, and before having taken any food, and holding the ashes to the part affected, says:—

‘*Ringworm, ringworm red!
Never mayst thou either spread or speed
But aye grow less and less,
And die away among the ase’ (ashes);*

at the same time throwing the little ashes held between the forefinger and thumb into the fire.

CASTING THE HEART.

THE Rev. Dr James Gibson, of Avoch, Ross-shire, writes:—I shall add one instance more of superstitious belief which appears to have taken hold of the mind of the Shetlander at a very early period, and which, like the others above enumerated, still retains its hold, though, perhaps, under some modifications. It is called ‘casting the heart.’ It has long been believed that, when a person is emaciated with sickness, his heart is worn away, or taken away by some evil genii. A person skilled in ‘casting the heart’ is sent for, who, with many mystic ceremonies, melts lead, pours it through the bowl of a key or pair of scissors held over a sieve, which is also placed over a basin of cold water. The lead is melted and poured again and again, till it assumes something like the appearance of a heart; at least the operator strives to convince the patient and his friends that this is the case. It is worn suspended from the neck, next the skin, that the cure may be completed.

BURN.

To cure a burn the following words are used:—

‘*Here come I to cure a burnt sore;
If the dead knew what the living endure
The burnt sore would burn no more.*’

The operator, after having repeated the above, blows his breath three times upon the burnt place. The above is recorded to have been communicated to a daughter who had been burned by the spirit of her deceased mother.

FEY FOLK.

It is a practice with some to burn the straw on which a corpse has lain, and to examine very narrowly the ashes, from a belief that the print of the individual’s foot who is next to be carried to the grave will be discovered. The straw is set on fire when the body is lifted and the funeral company are leaving the house.

ELF-SHOT.

A notion is prevalent in the parish, that when a cow is suddenly taken ill she is elf-shot; that is, that a kind of spirits, called ‘trows,’ different in their nature from fairies, have discharged a stone arrow at her, and wounded her with it. Though no wound can be seen externally, there are different persons, both males and females, who pretend to feel it in the flesh, and to cure it by repeating certain words over the cow. They also fold a sewing-needle in a leaf taken from a particular part of a Psalm book, and secure it in the hair of the cow, which is considered not only as an infallible cure, but which also serves as a charm against future attacks. When a cow has calved, it is the practice with some, as soon after as possible, to set a cat on her neck, and draw it by the tail to the hinder part of the cow; and then to set it on the middle of the eow's back, and draw it down the one side, and pull it up the other, tail foremost, that the eow may be preserved, while in a weak state, from being carried away by the 'trows.' This is enclosing the eow, as it were, in a magic circle. As the 'trows' are said to have a particular relish for what is good, both in meat and drink, so, when a cow or sheep happens to turn sick or die, it is firmly believed that it has been shot by an elfin-arrow, and that the real animal has been taken away, and something of a 'trowie' breed substituted in its place. And some, who have been admitted into the interior of a trow's dwelling, assert that they have beheld their own cow led in to be slaughtered, while at the same time their friends on the surface of the earth saw her fall by an unseen hand, or tumble over a precipice. Sometimes, also, the trows require a nurse of their children; for it would appear that they too have a time to be born and a time to die; and therefore females newly confined must needs be watched very narrowly, lest they be carried off to perform the office of wet-nurse to some trowling of gentle blood, who has either lost its mother, or whose station among her own race exempts her from the drudgery of nursing her own offspring. There is one place in the parish called 'Trolhouland,' a name which indicates the superstitious notions with which it is associated—it signifies 'the high land of the trows.' The internal recesses of knolls are considered the favourite residences of the trows, and they are seldom passed without fear and dread by the inhabitants of the upper world. And when, after nightfall, there may be a necessity for passing that way, a live coal is carried to ward off their attacks. For many centuries the same superstitious belief has prevailed in Norway, that certain places were the favoured haunts of malevolent genii. There is their 'Trolhetta,' and in Iceland, 'Troladyngiar' and 'Trollakykja.'

THE SEA-TROW.

THERE is a trow called a Neogle, somewhat akin to the water-kelpie of other lands, who makes his appearance about mills, particularly when grinding, in the shape of a beautiful pony. That he may attract the attention of the person who acts the part of the miller, he seizes and holds fast the wheel of the mill; and, as is natural, the miller goes out to examine into the cause of the stoppage; when, to his astonishment, a beautiful pony, saddled and bridled, is standing and ready to be mounted. Who but an old miller could let slip such a fair opportunity for a ride? But if he should neglect warnings, and unguardedly put his foot in the stirrup, his fate is sealed. Neither bit nor bridle avail him anything. Off goes the pony—bog or bank arrest not his course—ill in the deep sea he throws his rider, and he himself evanishes in a flush of flame. But some millers are proof against the temptation, having been taught caution by the fate of others—and, instead of taking a ride, salute his Neogleship with a fiery brand through the lightning-tree hole, which makes him immediately scamper away. From the supposed diabolical practices of this hob-goblin may have arisen the saying concerning a doubtful person, 'He is not to ride the water on.'

TAKING AWAY AND RECOVERING MILK AND BUTTER PROFITS.

THAT a person may take away and procure for herself the summer profits of her neighbour's cows, it is the practice to go clandestinely and pluck a handful of grass from the roof of the byre, and give it to her own cows, thereby supposing that the milk and butter which should have been her neighbour's will by this means become hers. And, in order to regain the profits which are supposed to have been taken away, it is usual to milk in private a cow belonging to the person who is suspected of having taken them, and thereby to get them back.

TAKING THE FREET.

TAKING the 'freet,' or charming away the produce of a neighbour's dairy, was extremely common. The same species of witchcraft seems to have been practised also in the south and west of Scotland. Burns, in his address to a certain celebrated personage, thus alludes to it:—

*'Thence countra wives, w' toil and pain,
May plunge, and plunge, the kirn in vain,
For oh! the yellow treasure's taen
By witching skill,
And dawtit twal pint Hawkie's gaen
As yiel's the Bill.'*

The 'freet' was commonly taken by a tether. An ancient dame was descried one morning very early, between sun and day, pacing slowly over the grass of a neighbour, drawing a long hair tether after her. The goodman, not thinking all right, set off after her, and fairly carrying home the tether, threw it behind an old 'girnal' or meal-chest. Shortly afterwards his wife went to churn, and was amazed to find the vessel full of butter the moment she began. After various surmises, they bethought them of the tether, which was taken from its place, and cut in slices. A large quantity of cream flowed from the rope thus sliced down, and afterwards all was as formerly.

THE BISHOP'S PALACE, KIRKWALL.

↑ N the immediate vicinity of the Cathedral are the remains of the Bishop's Palace. It is a very old building, and the time of its erection has not been ascertained. It was in this palace, in 1263, after the battle of Largs, that Haco, King of Denmark, took up his residence and shortly afterwards died, and in one of its upper chambers his body lay in state. A very small portion only of the edifice is all that now remains of the structure as it was in the days

BISHOP'S PALACE, AND CATHEDRAL, KIRKWALL.

*'When Norse and Danish galleys plied
Their oars within the Firth of Clyde;
When floated Haco's banner trim—
Savage of heart and large of limb.'*

The principal portion now standing was built by Bishop Reid in 1540, and consists of a tower, circular without, but square within, on the outside of the north wall of which is a stone statue of himself. It is called the mass tower, and from the top of it may be had a pretty extensive view of the town and neighbouring country; but the stair is so much decayed that it is extremely difficult, if not dangerous, to make the ascent. It is generally supposed that Earl Patrick joined his palace by a wall to the circular wall of this one, thereby forming the whole into a square.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Impurity of the Blood

Unless the blood be kept in a pure state the constitution must be weakened. These wonderful Pills possess the power of removing or neutralising all contaminations of the blood and system generally. They quietly, but certainly, overcome all obstructions tending to produce ill-health, and institute regular action in organs that are faulty from irritation or debility.

Weak Stomach: Impaired Digestion

The wisest cannot enumerate one titile of the distressing symptoms arising from enfeebled digestion, all of which may be readily dispelled by these admirable Pills, as they rouse the stomach, liver, and every other organ of digestion to that healthy tone which fully enables them to convert all food and drink to the nourishment of the body.

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, and Sore Throats

For curing diseases of the throat, chest, and lungs, these Pills have established for themselves a pre-eminently world-wide fame. Coughs, common colds, influenza, bronchitis, asthma, pleurisy, inflammation of the lungs, and even consumption in its early stages, are successfully treated with this medicine, particularly if Holloway's Ointment be well rubbed upon the chest and back night and morning.

Biliousness, Loss of Appetite, and Lowness of Spirits

The Pills effect a wonderful change in persons subject to bilious attack, as they create a healthy appetite, correct indigestion, remove excess of bile, and effectually cure jaundice, bilious remittents, and all the varieties of disease generated by an unhealthy condition of the liver.

The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor HOLLOWAY's Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilised World, in Boxes, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. Full printed directions are affixed to each Box and Pot, and can be had in any language, even in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, and Ulcerations of all kinds

There is no medicinal preparation which may be so thoroughly relied upon in the treatment of the above ailments as Holloway's Ointment. Nothing can be more simple and safe than the manner it is applied; nothing more salutary than its action on the body, both locally and constitutionally.

Gout, Rheumatism, Stiff Joints

Gout and Rheumatism arise from inflammation of the parts affected. To effect a permanent cure, adopt a cooling diet, drink plenty of water, take six of Holloway's Pills night and morning, and rub this Ointment most effectually twice a day into the suffering parts; when used simultaneously, they drive all inflammation and depression from the system, subdue and remove all enlargement of the joints, and leave the sinews and muscles lax and uncontracted.

Eruptions on the Skin

In this class of complaints, no matter the age, the sex, or the place, or under what name the disease may be classified, it will be cured if this Ointment be well rubbed into the system, and Holloway's Pills taken night and morning to purify the blood.

Abscesses, Erysipelas, Piles

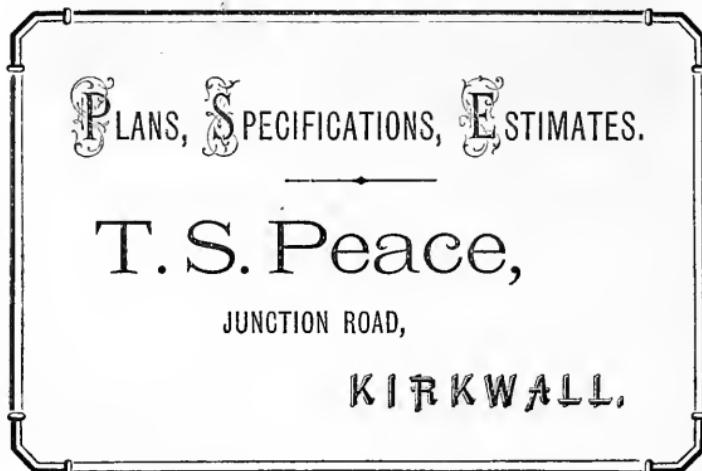

A little attention, moderate perseverance, and trifling expense, will enable the most diffident to conduct any case to a happy issue without exposing their infirmities to anyone. The Ointment arrests the inflammation, alleviates throbbing and smarting pains, and gives immediate ease and ultimate cure.

The Ointment and Pills are sold at Professor HOLLOWAY's Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilised World, in Pots and Boxes, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each.

Full printed directions are affixed to each Pot and Box, and can be had in any language, even in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

DR ROBERTS' CELEBRATED MEDICINES.

THE OINTMENT CALLED "THE POOR MAN'S FRIEND,"

Is confidently recommended as an unfailing remedy for wounds of every description, and a certain cure for ulcerated sore legs, even if of twenty years' standing. It is invaluable also for cuts, burns, bruises, chilblains, ulcers, scorbutic eruptions, pimples on the face, weak and inflamed eyes, piles, fistula, and is a specific for those eruptions which sometimes follow vaccination. DR ROBERTS'

PILULÆ ANTISCROPHULÆ, OR ALTERATIVE PILLS,

Are proved (by sixty years' trial) to be a cure for scrofula, glandular swellings (particularly those of the neck), &c. They are one of the best medicines ever compounded for purifying the blood, and as a mild and superior aperient, may be taken at all times without confinement or change of diet. Sold in boxes, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 22s. each.

TESTIMONIAL:—"I have much pleasure in informing you of the effect on me of a single Pot of your 'Poor Man's Friend' Ointment. For seven years I suffered from Scurvy in the back. It was of a disagreeable kind, even wetting my clothes through with the discharge. A 1s. 1½d pot has cured me, to my surprise and great gratification.

"Church Street, Midhurst, 24th Nov., 1870."

"JAMES CLARK.

TESTIMONIAL:—"Mrs Snooks, of Nash Farm, Marshwood, Dorset, after suffering upwards of six months from bad legs, and all other medical aid had failed, was advised to try Dr Roberts' Ointment, called the 'Poor Man's Friend.' After using only two pots, and taking two boxes of the Alterative Pills, she was perfectly restored, and wishes this to be made known for the good of sufferers.—February 15th, 1871."

T. H. S. would specially recommend his Stock of Choice

Teas and Essence of Coffee.

Fluid Extract of Senna.—The Fluid Extract being without taste or smell of the Senna, is taken by Children with the greatest readiness, either uncombined or with the addition of a little milk, coffee, or water. Dose for an adult, a table-spoonful; for Children under four years, twenty to thirty drops; from seven to ten years, a tea-spoonful; from ten to sixteen years, a dessert-spoonful.

Parrish's Syrup or Chemical Food.—This nourishing and very agreeable medicine is largely prescribed by many eminent physicians for persons of delicate constitutions, where nutriment in its most easily assimilated condition is required. It possesses tonic and nutritive properties in many respects superior to Cod Liver Oil, and may be taken with pleasure by invalids to whom the odour and taste of the Oil are repugnant. It not only acts as a powerful tonic, but supplies the whole frame with its most important elements. Dose for Adults, one tea-spoonful in a little water after meals; Children from eight to ten years, half a tea-spoonful; and more or less according to age.

Fluid Extract of Taraxacum or Dandelion.—This preparation possesses all the freshness of the recent root in a highly concentrated form, and will keep for any length of time. Dose—One or two tea-spoonfuls three times a day in a wine-glassful of water.

Finest Newfoundland Cod Liver Oil.—Prepared at

Newfoundland from the fresh livers, and is free from all unpleasant taste, so common in Oil of an inferior quality. May also be obtained combined with Quinine.

THE "ALBION" FOODS,

MANUFACTURED IN THE FORM OF CAKES, MEALS, SEASONING, AND CONCENTRATED MIXTURES.

THE NUT ROLL CAKES possess a great advantage over other Cakes in being manufactured in small pieces—from three to five inches in length by five-eighths of an inch in diameter—which merely require to be placed before the animals without the trouble and expense of breaking down. The MEAL does best for indoor feeding, and is very suitable for mixing with inferior stuffs such as Bran, Draff, Chaff, etc.

The most important of the Albion Foods to Feeders is the MEAL FOR FATTENING CATTLE. It possesses great feeding powers, and animals fed upon it for the Edinburgh Christmas Club Show, were noticed for their firmness of flesh—a point which is never overlooked by the Butcher, and one which adds materially to the value of the animal.

The DAIRY COW MEAL is milk-producing. It is wonderful how it increases the quantity and enriches the quality of the Milk, Cream, and Butter, while at the same time the animals are kept in first-class health and condition. This Food is in great favour with Dairymen, and can be highly recommended.

The FOOD FOR HORSES has great strengthening powers, and enables the animals to undergo a large amount of work and fatigue. Those who use it for their horses say that no matter how severe the exertion, they sweat little compared with horses fed otherwise.

The MEAL FOR SHEEP meets with great favour. In wet winter weather, which is much against the fattening of Sheep, they have been found to thrive well on the Albion Meal. Testimonials have also been received of the great increase and improvement in the quality of the Wool.

The SEASONING MIXTURES, like other similar Condiments, give an appetite to animals which may not be thriving well, and promote the healthy and vigorous action of the digestive organs. They also possess great feeding qualities.

The extraordinary success that has attended the use of the CONCENTRATED MIXTURE FOR CALVES cannot be overlooked. Nowhere have Calves been known to improve so rapidly and keep in such good health. The Food is mixed in two-thirds or one-half of the usual quantity of milk, and given to the Calves when they are two or three weeks old; the saving in milk is great.

Messrs John Moir & Son, Aberdeen, who feed over one thousand pigs, write:—"The CONCENTRATED MIXTURE FOR PIGS when given in small quantities is most beneficial to the health of the animals. It gives them an appetite for their food, and they sleep more after it than after any other Meat we have tried."

The CONCENTRATED MIXTURE FOR POULTRY AND GAME possesses great flesh-forming qualities.

The excellent flavour and taste of the Albion Food is such, that substances, such as Draff, which have been overkept, will be eaten readily by the animals when the Albion Meal is mixed with them. There was one instance of this where an Edinburgh Dairyman saved several tons of sour and mouldy Draff, which would otherwise have been useless for food.

Certain quantities are sent Carriage Free.

H AND - B OOK TO THE ORKNEY ISLANDS.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"It is well-written, well-printed, and not too bulky for a guide."—Scotsman.

"This is a convenient little volume devoted to the Orkney Islands. It tells us of their history, antiquities, trade, manners, &c., and is interesting to the general reader as well as the tourist, for whom it is specially designed."—Inverness Courier.

"This is one of the most interesting and instructive books of its class that has ever passed through our hands. It is at once a succinct history, and a charming description of Orkney, containing the essentials of a portable 'guide.'"—Forres Gazette.

"A compact, well-written, and comprehensive Hand-book to the Orkney Islands has just been published by Mr Peace, Kirkwall. It supplies a want that must have been often felt by tourists and visitors to these interesting islands, who frequently miss opportunities of seeing places and objects of interest, simply for the want of a properly systematised guide-book to remind them of their proximity at the proper time. The Hand-book devotes considerable space to the antiquities of the islands, and the historical portions are succinctly but spiritedly written."—John O'Groats Journal.

"Peace's Hand-Book to the Orkney Islands.—This is the title of a really admirable production, neatly got up, and admirably printed on excellent paper. The literary matter in all respects justifies the title, and makes this neat little Hand-book both useful and attractive."—Northern Ensign.

Price One Shilling.

Hand-Book to the Shetland Islands.

WITH MAP AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Mr William Peace, of Kirkwall, has issued a Hand-Book to the Shetland Islands. Tourists are pushing farther and farther to the North, and it may be hoped that some of them may be induced to visit Shetland and Orkney, where most certainly they will find much that will deeply interest them. They could not have better help in their work of seeing the country than will be afforded them by this guide-book."—Scotsman.

"The most cursory glance at the contents of the little volume will show the reader how much there is of novelty and interest in the situation and configuration of the Shetland Isles. A look even at the illustrations will suffice for that purpose. It is questionable whether, under the wide canopy of heaven, there is anywhere else such magnificent scenery as presented by the bold precipitous rocks on some parts of the Shetland coast. There are various singular customs and usages in Shetland, which render the manners of the people not less worthy of study than the topography. In these respects the new Hand-Book is a convenient and intelligent guide."—Daily Review.

"A Hand-book to the Shetland Islands has just been published—a volume of 113 pages, with map and 17 illustrations—and the little work is highly creditable to the press of Mr William Peace, Kirkwall, and to the anonymous author of the descriptions, who displays taste and talent, and that love of his subject—that strong local attachment which gives a zest and originality to his pages."—Inverness Courier.

"This well-got-up little work will be of invaluable service to the numerous tourists who now yearly visit the Shetland Islands. It is intelligently and systematically arranged, and the historical part displays no little research. In order that the more interesting and romantic district may be overtaken within a brief space of time, the author sketches out five excursions which may be made from Lerwick. There are numerous illustrations interspersed throughout the work, and altogether it will be found to be a valuable addition to our guide books."—Aberdeen Herald.

"A neat and excellent Hand-book to the Shetland Islands, comprising upwards of 113 pages of descriptive letter-press, with a well-executed map of the island group, and several illustrations of the scenery, antiquities, &c. It contains notes of the several places of interest to the tourist, the broughs, camps, chapels, tumuli, and memorial stones, with descriptive accounts of the several islands, the scenery, fisheries, agriculture, &c. Altogether, it is a very serviceable hand-book, and the visitor to Shetland would do well to make it his first purchase on his way northwards."—John O'Groat Journal.

The Treasury of Sacred Song :

A Selection of upwards of 300 of the Finest Ancient and Modern Hymns, many of them Copyright.

Edited by the REV. DAVID WEBSTER, KIRKWALL.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Mr Webster has brought together nearly 300 hymns in this little book, and has shown sound judgment and good taste in the selection. He found no collection of hymns altogether suitable for Evangelistic Meetings and Sabbath Schools, and has accordingly compiled a hymnal which he can with more confidence put in the hands of young and old. The object has been to include as many of the gems of our sacred lyrists as possible, and to exclude all which, however popular, are objectionable in point of diction or good taste. Mr Webster has fairly succeeded, and we have no doubt his collection will be used beyond the coasts of Orkney."—Daily Review.

"The Rev. Mr Webster, believing that the hymn-books generally used in Sabbath Schools are of too juvenile a character for a school composed to a great extent of young men and women, has compiled the 'Treasury of Sacred Song,' chiefly with a view to the Editor's own Sabbath School and Evangelistic Services in the neighbourhood. Much taste and care have been displayed in the selections he has made, and many of the original hymns possess much poetical merit. . . . The 'Treasury' is well got up, and reflects infinite credit on the Kirkwall press. This neat little work will, we are sure, be found useful to many beyond the locality for which it has been specially prepared."—Elgin Courier.

"Several collections of hymns have one time and another passed through our hands. For years we have been in the habit of devoting Sunday evening to the reading aloud of sacred poetry. The more importance, therefore, should perhaps be attached to the opinion which we express when we aver that the 'Treasury of Sacred Song' will not suffer by comparison, whatever it may gain, with similar compilations. Although we have subjected it to a somewhat strict examination—having faithfully read the 293 hymns of which its consists—we are happy to be able to state that we have not found in Mr Webster's 'Treasury' any base coin, or even coin of inferior value. . . . To succeed in a task of this kind the compiler must possess a well-balanced—and informed—mind; must have a fine ear for music, and genuine sympathy with poetical compositions; literary taste and spiritual discernment, growing out of Christian experience, thorough knowledge of the Scriptures and the system of religion therein revealed, as well as of human nature in its needs, aspirations, hopes, fears, temptations, and afflictions. Now, judging from what he has done in the small volume under review, we hesitate not to affirm that Mr Webster has all these qualifications in a high degree; and we doubt not but that the 'Treasury of Sacred Song,' which, so far as its get-up is concerned, reflects credit upon Printer and Publisher, will win its way in and around Kirkwall—the place of its birth—and do much to render the Sabbath Schools and Devotional Meetings, into which it may be introduced, interesting and effective."—Irish Temperance League Journal.

New and Popular Edition. With Map and Illustrations. Crown 8vo., 5s.

Summers and Winters in the Orkneys.

By DANIEL GORRIE.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Mr Gorrie has written one of the most sensible and useful books of the kind that we have for some time met with."—British Quarterly Review.

"Either as a manual or memorial of travel, Mr Gorrie's book will be found equally useful and agreeable."—Athenaeum.

"'Summers and Winters in the Orkneys' is a very satisfactory little volume."—Saturday Review.

"This book gives an interesting account of Orkney, which although forming part of the United Kingdom, is yet sufficiently foreign in manners, history, and climate to excite a feeling of strangeness. Mr Gorrie describes with much spirit the pomp and the cruelty of the iniquitous Patrick Stewart."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The successive chapters are full of information for all classes of readers—the tourist, the antiquarian, the student of natural history in all its branches, the agriculturist, the trader, the social reformer, and the ecclesiastic. There is often a quiet humour about the descriptions, giving zest and flavour to the humblest subjects."—Daily Review.

"Seldom has it been our good fortune to read a book of travel that yielded us a greater amount of pleasure than the one the title of which stands at the head of this article. We closed the book with our head stored with the facts, and our heart full of gratitude for the literary treat with which Mr Gorrie has favoured us."—Cook's Excursionist.

"The book is full of entertaining matter, of curious customs, local peculiarities, and historic memorials. Mr Gorrie is likewise an enthusiastic admirer of nature, and his descriptions of scenery are exceedingly poetical and never too high-flown. A pleasanter or better-written work we have not come across for a very long time."—Daily Telegraph.

"We are indebted to Mr Daniel Gorrie for one of the most interesting and agreeable books of its kind we have read for some time. The volume is full of information conveyed in graceful, unpretending style, and rich with passages of description which are as animated as they are accurate. He has the whole history, poetry, legendary lore, and romance of the islands and their rocks and seas all by heart. . . . Some of the descriptions are really excellent."—Morning Star.

"As we shall have again to refer to weather topics, we shall quit the subject for the present, and begin our examination of Mr Gorrie's interesting and unpretending book on the Orkney Islands. . . . The bottle-nosed or ca'ing whale is a frequent visitor to the bays of the Orkneys, and Mr Gorrie gives a spirited description of one of these whale hunts. For the account of the chase we must refer our readers to the book, in which, moreover, they will find a considerable amount of information concerning other Orcadian topics to which our limits have prevented us from referring."—Times.

The History of the Orkney Islands.

By the REV. GEORGE BARRY, D.D.;

WITH A PREFATORY ACCOUNT OF THE AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS AND PRESENT STATE OF THE ISLANDS.

"The frequent inquiries made for 'Barry's History of Orkney,' and the great scarcity of the work, have induced the Publisher to issue a new edition, more convenient in point of size, and much cheaper than the original quarto.

"The changes which have taken place since 1800 render much of the descriptive portion of the work inapplicable to the present state of the Islands, but instead of interfering with the text, or cumbering the pages with footnotes, it has been deemed advisable to reprint the Book as written, with the addition of a Prefatory Chapter, giving some account of the improvements effected within the past sixty years. The Publisher did not feel himself at liberty to cut and carve upon the text, and he trusts that the additional matter, supplementary to the contents of chapters in the body of the work, may be regarded as more interesting and satisfactory than a series of scattered footnotes."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A volume which, in point of editing and mechanical execution, would do no discredit to the metropolis."—The Right Hon. W. Chambers, Lord Provost of Edinburgh.

"'Barry's History of Orkney,' long scarce, has been longer a valuable work of reference, and Mr Peace has done great public service by re-printing it entire, and greater still by prefacing it with a most interesting chapter, detailing the present material state of Orkney under a series of suitable heads, the details being on the whole remarkably succinct and comprehensive, and enabling the reader to draw an instructive comparison between Orkney at the commencement of the present century and Orkney as it now is."—Northern Ensign.

"We think it right to commend very highly the prefatory chapter. It is the work, we believe, of a gentleman eminent for his knowledge of Orcadian antiquities."—Edinburgh Courant.

"The work has been always prized by Orcadians as the best and fullest account given of the history, topography, products, and industry of their native islands."—Daily Review.

"The work has been carefully edited, and as the publisher has wisely determined not to interfere with the text, the changes which have taken place since 1800 have been summarised in a prefatory chapter, which gives an excellent review of the island group, in agriculture and industrial arts, during the past sixty years. A beautiful frontispiece of the Cathedral and Bishops' Palaces, and a fine view of the Loch and Standing Stones of Stenness, with woodcuts of the 'dragon' of Maeshow and the ruins of that famous building, accompany the descriptive portions of the work, which is thus brought out in as neat and handsome a manner, and with such a style and finish, as would do credit to the best publishing house of the metropolis."—John O'Groat Journal.

"To alight upon such a work as the one now before us is to find a hid treasure. Whether we turn over the papers of the history proper, and reconstruct the past life of the Orcadians, or go with the antiquary to Stenness, or the Maeshow, and confront the pre-historic periods in their grand memorials, or talk with the author on the manners and customs of the people, we shall find in this work materials ample and varied for rousing our interest and adding to our stock of knowledge."—Arbroath Guide.

DR J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From LORD FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December 1868.

"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See 'Lancet,' 1st December 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION. Vice Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See 'Times,' 13th July 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp.

Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

"Canon Ridgway is no novice in the scholastic service, nor a theorist in matters educational. The result of his editorial labours are thoroughly satisfactory. He has combined the technical qualifications of the schoolmaster with the polish and breadth of the scholar; and, by these means, has produced a series of books distinguished by their literary excellence, as well as by their practical utility. Most of the matter is new, and has been carefully edited. Taken altogether, the Progressive Readers are about the best we have yet had occasion to notice."—THE SCHOOLMASTER.

WORLD'S HIGHEST PRIZE

MOWING & REAPING MACHINES.

THE MOWER

Is too well known to need description. The highest Prizes ever awarded have been received. Lately it has been presented with further improvements, and in a new form.

THE ONE-HORSE REAPER

Is both new and novel. It is remarkable for its extreme simplicity and compactness ; and for the ease and rapidity with which all adjustments can be made by the driver. The draught is so light as to astonish all ; and the Machine as a whole is most perfect.

THE SELF-DELIVERY REAPER

("Wood's CHAMPION")

Is the most simple and efficient Reaper made. The general construction is the same as the One-Horse, but with Rakes equally novel. There are neither chains nor cogs to drive the Rakes, and nothing to get out of order. The Sheaf can be regulated at pleasure, and the driver has entire control of the Machine. It is just what has been wanted—light draught, easy work, strong and durable.

THESE MACHINES EXCEL ALL OTHERS.

WOOD'S MACHINES

Are more extensively sold, and more generally used, than any similar implement. The demand increases year by year. They are sold in all parts of the world, and are admitted to be unequalled. The Subscriber may state that he has sold

UPWARDS OF 100 OF THESE REAPERS

In Orkney alone since he received the Agency.

THE BEST ADAPTED FOR THE SOIL AND CLIMATE OF ORKNEY.

IN again directing the attention of Agriculturists to these excellent Manures, it seems only necessary for the Subscriber to say that he will have a supply on hand at the usual season.

These Manures are now so well known to Farmers in all parts of the County, and the success which has attended their use has been so remarkable—as well when used by themselves as when tested alongside other Manures, even the best Peruvian Guano—that he has repeatedly been unable to meet the demand, or supply the orders of customers.

Farmers should note that PRENTICE'S MANURES, in addition to producing an abundant crop on their first application, also so greatly enrich the soil that succeeding crops are largely benefited thereby.

These Manures, while the LOWEST IN PRICE, have produced the finest crops ever raised in the County.

"THE POSSESSION OF HEALTH IS MORE PRECIOUS THAN WEALTH."

KAY'S COMPOUND ESSENCE OF LINSEED.

"If anything is worth knowing, it is worthy of being extensively known."—With this object, the following is extracted from the "FAMILY REFERENCE":—

THIS judicious combination is the most effective remedy for and preventive against the consequences arising from exposure to Cold in any degree—Catarrh in any form.

When we consider the serious and fatal complaints which have their origin in a slight Cold—complaints which may be the prelude to various inflammatory diseases, and of which Consumption may be one of its terminations—the advantage of a reliable remedy will be acknowledged by all.

A Cold

Will, with different individuals, show itself in a variety of forms, most common being Coryza, or Cold in the Head, well known by the lassitude, weariness, and flying pains over the body, fullness about the head, weight or pain across the forehead, dry, stuffed-up nostrils, frequent sneezing, with "bit of a cough," and tightness across the chest, &c.

At once let the patient take a teaspoonful of Kay's Essence of Linseed, mixed with a wine-glassful of warm water at bed-time—follow the directions given with each bottle, and much evil will be avoided. An instance:—

From the Rev. D. G. THOMAS, Curate of St Luke's Church, Heywood

Messrs Kay Brothers, Heywood, May 3rd, 1866.
Sirs,—With regard to the efficacy of your Compound Essence of Linseed in relieving Coughs, Colds, &c., I am happy to give you my experience of it. I have only had to try it once, and then it completely cured me. At that time I was suffering from a very harrassing cough—the remnant of a severe cold—the effect of the remedy was soon perceptible, and in a day or two the cough was entirely gone.

Yours truly, D. G. THOMAS.

Pulmonary Catarrh or Cold on the Chest.

That this complaint may be the better understood, it is requisite to know that the windpipe and bronchial tubes—the tubes leading from the windpipe to the lungs—are lined with a delicate membrane, called the mucus membrane, which in a state of health is kept constantly moist by a secretion of mucus—a bland, non-irritating fluid. The first effect of cold on this membrane is to render it dry; its secretion is suspended, it becomes tumid and swollen, and then begins to form phlegm—the accumulation and necessary expectoration of which causes a very exhausting cough, which severely strains the muscles of the chest and lungs.

This cough, by the neglect of ordinary precautions and suitable remedies, engrafs itself on the system, making a person what is termed "delicate on the chest," susceptible to every cold draught of air; or it produces a chronic "Winter Cough," with, perhaps, Asthma, or if there be inflammation, Bronchitis, if it do not end, as it commonly does, in Consumption. Let everyone, therefore, beware of a slight Cold, remembering the well-known lines of Dr Darwin—

"Ils, small at first, grow larger by delay,
And slowly eat their sad and cankering way;
Thus by successive throes the frame is torn,
Till health and peace of mind alike are gone."

In the treatment of this complaint it is needful to gently act upon the bowels with Kay's Pills of the Linum Catharticum, taking a good dose of Kay's Essence of Linseed, at bed-time, and repeating in half-doses when the chest is irritated during the day. For full directions see the "Family Reference," with each bottle.

For Asthma.

No remedy has hitherto been so available for instant relief as Kay's Essence of Linseed. A teaspoonful in water at bed-time, when an attack is expected, will be found to remove the preliminary constrictive and apprehensive feeling and give gentle repose. The same dose taken whenever an attack comes on, and repeated in half-doses every half-hour until relieved, is pronounced by many old Asthmatic patients to be the only remedy they can depend upon.

Consumption of the Lungs, or Decline

Is, unfortunately, too well known to require much description. The surprising cures effected in Stockport by Kay's Essence have astonished many; combining the soothing, healing, and expectorating tonic virtues of Linseed, Horehound, Aniseed, Senega, and Tolu, it gently frees the Lung from clotted phlegm, heals up the pustular wounds from the core, relieves the chest by expectoration without straining, removes all difficulty of breathing, and by its healthy stimulus to the proper circulation of the fluids and due digestion of the solids it has not inaptly ascribed for itself the name of the "STOCKPORT REMEDY."

For Children.

Gentlemen,—I drop you a few lines to speak in highest terms possible of your Essence of Linseed. I have had three of my children ill of the Whooping Cough, but a bottle or two of your valuable remedy has restored them all to the full enjoyment of good health. It really is the finest preparation for Coughs, Colds, and Shortness of Breath, I know of, and I shall recommend it to all my friends in Derbyshire, as well as in other counties.

Yours truly,

Victoria Corn Mills, Bakewell. W. P. DARWENT.

Arrangements have been made by which any Druggist or Medicine Vendor, if he should not have it on hand, can supply it to order at the same price as at Stockport—viz., 9*½*d., 1s. 1*½*d., and 2s. 9d. each, or half-a-dozen 2s. 9d. size will be sent direct, carriage paid, to any railway station in Great Britain, on receipt of Post-office order for 16s. 6d., by the proprietors, Kay Brothers, Stockport.

THE FANCIER'S GAZETTE:
A Breeder's and Exhibitor's Journal.

Published every FRIDAY, at La Belle Sauvage Yard, Ludgate Hill, London, and supplied by all Newsagents and at the Railway Bookstalls in Town and Country.

THE FANCIER'S GAZETTE is peculiarly adapted for all who seek innocent and healthful recreation in PRIZE LIVE STOCK or PETS of any kind. It contains articles upon the various subjects by the very best authorities, Illustrated whenever necessary; and the fullest and most critical Reports of Exhibitions; and by the purity and elevation of its tone has made its way and carried the cultivation and love of Living Pets into many circles, which no journal treating of such subjects has ever before reached.

As an authority upon POULTRY-KEEPING in all its branches, its Editor is confessedly unequalled. The Aviary, so interesting to ladies, receives also special attention, under W. A. Blakston, Esq.

QUESTIONS relating to Practical Management are answered weekly through the "EDITOR'S DRAWER."

 TO ADVERTISERS.—THE FANCIER'S GAZETTE

now circulates far more largely than any other Paper amongst Breeders, Exhibitors, and Owners of Dogs, Poultry, Pigeons, Cage Birds, Rabbits, Cats, and other Pets of all kinds, and that circulation is still steadily increasing. Of the character of the Journal, the names of its Publishers and Editor are sufficient guarantee.

No Publication, therefore, can equal it as a medium for Advertisements relating to the SALE, PURCHASE, or EXCHANGE of any of the above. Such Advertisements, when not of a Trade character, and if prepaid, are inserted on very moderate terms, and afford the cheapest and best means of disposing of any such Live Stock.

THE FANCIER'S GAZETTE, moreover, circulates so widely amongst the very highest classes (who are often specially interested in the above subjects), as to make it a very certain means of reaching the best classes of general readers.

Terms for Advertisements in THE FANCIER'S GAZETTE will be sent on application to the MANAGER of the Advertising Department, La Belle Sauvage Yard, London, E.C.

THE NEW WORK ON PROTESTANTISM.

Messrs. CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN have just commenced the publication of A NEW and Original Work, by the Rev. J. A. WYLIE, LL.D., Author of "The Papacy," "Daybreak in Spain," &c., entitled

THE HISTORY OF PROTESTANTISM.

ILLUSTRATED.

In Weekly Numbers, 1d., and Monthly Parts, 7d.

LOLLARDS' TOWER. From "The History of Protestantism."

THE present moment is pre-eminently one which needs to have the History of the Reformation re-told. The old battle between the intolerant supremacy of Rome and the freedom alike of king and of subject, is being fought out in Germany; and signs are not wanting in England that her people will have to engage in the same conflict here at home. The PRIME MINISTER of England has avowed in her Senate his conviction "that however tranquil may be the general state of Europe—and, indeed, with the exception of one unhappy country, it is in a state of general tranquillity—there are agencies at this moment which are preparing a period of great disturbance."

N.B.—A Large PRESENTATION PLATE, "LUTHER'S FIRST STUDY OF THE BIBLE," suitable for framing, will be given with Part I.

Purchasers of Nos. 1 to 4 will be entitled to receive the Picture with No. 4.

** All persons who desire to promote the circulation of this important Work are invited to apply to the Publishers for a special supply of Prospectuses for distribution.

In beauty and cheapness this edition has never been surpassed."—The Bookseller.

Now publishing in Weekly Numbers, 1d., and Monthly Parts, 7d.

Cassell's Old and New London :

A Narrative of its History, its People, and its Places.

Order Part 24, in which the description of the Antiquities and Memorials of London, West of Temple Bar, will be commenced.

"The author is familiar not only with the literature of his subject, but with the subject itself. Such a book as he is writing cannot help being interesting and full of curious facts. It is full of illustrations."—Times.

"The most lavishly illustrated history of London ever published. It will remain a monument of enterprise to the publishers."—City Press.

"We gladly receive with warm praises Messrs. Cassell, Petter & Galpin's 'National Portrait Gallery' of eminent Englishmen. There is now a rage for portraits, and these excellent likenesses, printed in Colours, will correct any false ideas gathered from the exaggerations of the comic artist."—Publishers' Circular.

"This new Gallery promises to be what its title aims at—a work of national importance."—Broad Arrow.

"NO BETTER PLAN," says the Daily Telegraph, "FOR ACQUIRING A HANDSOME AND TRUSTWORTHY COPY OF SHAKESPEARE, that shall vie with the best that a wealthy student of English poetic literature might place on his shelves, could be recommended to any household of limited means than simply taking the weekly numbers or monthly parts of the new large-paper re-issue of Cassell's serial edition, copiously illustrated by Selous. Poor indeed must be the family or the single person who, having any culture or desire to obtain it, finds it hard to spare three-halfpence every Saturday, when the inducement and the return are both so great." Splendidly printed on royal quarto paper, this is really a "PEOPLE'S SHAKESPEARE," not restricted in its appeal to the favour of any class, but sure of acceptance by all. The notes and the editorial labour are those of Mr. and Mrs. Cowden Clarke, whose names, it is scarcely necessary to say, are among the most notable in Shakespearian scholarship."

CASSELL'S HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

VIEW IN LABRADOR. - From "Cassell's History of the United States."

WHILST no one can fail to be impressed with the present importance of the great Republic of the United States among the nations of the earth, in respect not only of its political organisation, but also of its commercial activity and vast territorial extent, there are few persons who have an adequate conception of the romantic character of its rise and the absorbing interest of its progress. We propose, therefore, in this Work to narrate the marvellous history of that great nation's life, going back to those early days when a few heroic Englishmen landed on the coast of an almost unknown continent, whose primeval forests covered the land upon which now stands the capital of the great Republic of the West.

To record these great events—to recount these social, political, and religious conflicts—to describe the rise, the progress, and the present greatness of America—are the objects of Cassell's Illustrated History of the United States.

The Work will be accurately and profusely illustrated throughout with Wood Engravings, Maps, Plans, &c.

EPPS'S C O C O A. BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up, until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us, ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame." —On Diet, in the "Civil Service Gazette."

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cacao bean passes through ere it is sold for public use; and, being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cacao, and the way it is manufactured by Messrs Epps to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of 'Land and Water.'”—See Article in "Land and Water."
